Recap

Educator: The previous lesson covered the topic of diversity among children. Children can have different physical characteristics such as hair or skin colour, and some may have disabilities affecting their sight, mobility, or behaviour. Each child has a heart capable of love and friendship, and it saddens God when we hurt or reject others. God desires us to be friends and treat each other with kindness. Friends spend time together, exchange gifts, and offer help when needed. We are all different, but we are together!

Homework check

Activity: Call each child to the centre of the class one by one. Show them the cards from the previous lesson and ask them how they can be friends with others.

Introduction

Materials needed:

not required

Educator: Each day is filled with various actions that can cause different emotions. People experience different types of emotions depending on their experiences. Today, we will discuss how to understand emotions.

Main part

Discussion «Emotions»

Activity: Display an emoticon to the children, followed by a photograph of a child expressing that emotion (see folder Lesson 6).

Educator: We get angry when things don't go as planned. For instance, we may feel angry when someone takes away a toy we wanted to play with. Anger is often accompanied by physical signs such as furrowed brows, a clenched mouth, and fists.

Another emotion is shame, which we experience when we do something wrong or hurtful to others. When we feel ashamed, we often cover our eyes with our hand to conceal our emotions.

Materials needed:

emoticons and photos of children with emotions (see folder Lesson 6)

Materials needed:

a mirror, emoticons and photos of children with emotions (see folder Lesson 6), a sheet of paper and coloured pencils for each participant

Materials needed:

emoticon boxes, photos of different people with emotions

Creative activity «My Emotion»

Activity: The emoticons and photos presented to the children during the initial conversation are affixed to the wall (see folder Lesson 6). Provide the children with sheets of paper, encourage them to select an emotion they are experiencing, show that emotion on their face, examine themselves in the mirror, and draw themselves with that emotion on the paper provided.

Exercise «Define»

Activity: Emoticon boxes are located in the centre of the classroom, with pictures of people displaying various emotions scattered throughout the room. Children must assign the pictures to the boxes. The task is to match the pictures to the boxes.

Conclusion

Educator: Today we learned that people can experience different emotions depending on their experiences, actions, or the actions of others. Each emotion is displayed on a person's face and has characteristics. By observing a person's facial expressions, you can determine their emotional state. A playful person may want to squeal, and a happy person will smile broadly. For instance, a person who is angry will frown, while someone who is ashamed will try to hide their face with their hands. A sad person will cry, and a surprised person will open their eyes and mouth wide.

Homework

Activity: At the end of the lesson, each child will receive a homework card (see Appendix 1). There are questions on the card that the child should discuss with their parents or caregivers at home.

Evaluation

Activity: Call each child to the centre of the classroom one by one, with a craft in their hands. Demonstrate the soft toy to the child and express its fear. Then, invite the child to decide how to help the toy overcome its fear. Finally, ask the child to show their funny monster, name the fear, and say, 'I'm not afraid of you!'

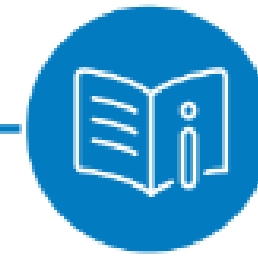

Materials needed:

a soft toy

Lesson 6

How do I understand emotions?

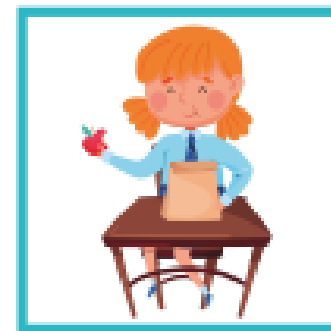

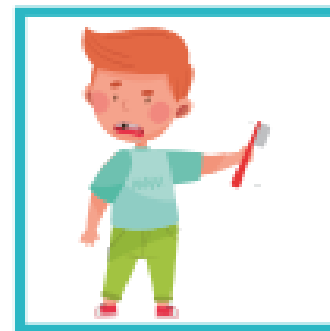

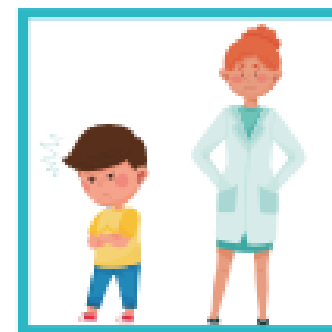

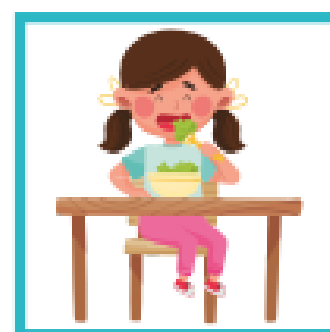

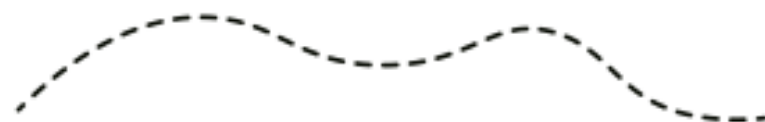

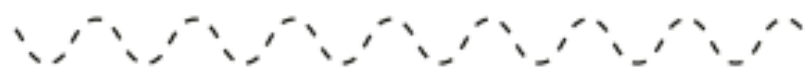

Recommendations for parents and caregivers

- Express your emotions. Regardless of whether the situation is happy or sad, it is important to express your emotions in front of your child. This will help your child to match their own behaviour to what is happening. Over time, they will become more aware of different situations and will begin to apply this in practice.
- Take an interest in the child's emotional state. If the child is at kindergarten or school, be sure to ask how the day went, paying attention to the little things. The phrase «How was your day?» is not enough; it is important to ask about your child's impressions of playing and studying, about time spent with friends, about possible offenses and sad moods during the day. It is desirable to ask
